MedShare[®]

Improving the quality of life of people and our planet

2017 Annual Report

Dear Friends,

As we reflect on what MedShare accomplished over the past year with your support, we would also like to look to the future and what we can achieve given the foundation that this work has built.

With your help, we were able to launch our Maternal & Child Health initiative, 2 Million Mothers, that will aid in reducing mortality rates for pregnancy and childbirth-related illnesses in communities where traditional medical care is unavailable. Our partnership with the Ministry of Health in Ethiopia allowed us to provide $9.2 million of medical supplies and biomedical equipment to strengthen their health system and support victims of famine and drought as they recover in the coming years. Because we trained more than 800 engineers and technicians to use and repair state of the art biomedical equipment this year, we can support hospitals in developing nations with the tools they need to save lives for years to come.

None of those accomplishments would have been possible without the community that supports us. Everyone, from the volunteers who sort our supplies to the medical professionals who use those supplies to treat patients, enables our work. Because our donors invest in our mission, we can continue to serve communities in 100 countries. Because over 20,000 volunteers give their time and talents each year, we can divert millions of pounds of quality supplies from local landfills. Because our hospital and product partners donate generously, we can equip more than 766,000 healthcare professionals with the tools they need to save lives. Because those healthcare professionals continue to treat people in the most remote areas, we can reach more than 19 million patients who would otherwise go without care. Because each member of MedShare's worldwide community cares deeply, we can accomplish all of this and so much more.

Because you care, we can protect mothers and children from preventable illnesses and support healthy families. We can help communities recover from disasters and safeguard against infectious disease outbreaks. We can support underserved populations and restore their trust in healthcare. We can equip medical professionals with essential supplies and lifesaving knowledge. We can provide sustainable aid and expand access to quality healthcare. We can improve the quality of life of people and our planet.

Because you care, we can affect change together. We are truly grateful for your support and trust.

Yours in service,

Charles Redding,
CEO & President

Angeline Fife,
Board Chair

Our Mission

MedShare is dedicated to improving the quality of life of people, communities and our planet by sourcing and directly delivering surplus medical supplies and equipment to communities in need around the world.

Our Commitment

MedShare is committed to providing assistance to all healthcare organizations and medical professionals that serve vulnerable populations regardless of religion, political affiliation, or race. MedShare often partners with various faith-based and non-governmental organizations to fulfill our mission. MedShare is steadfast in our obligation to provide high-quality medical supplies and equipment to hospitals and clinics in need.

Our Purpose

MedShare is a humanitarian aid organization that sources surplus, essential medical supplies and equipment and directly delivers them, with training, to medical facilities around the world to help build capacity and improve the quality of life of people, communities, and our planet.

Our Community

MedShare relies solely on the generosity of individuals, foundations, corporations, and government grants to carry out our mission.

A baby receives his vaccinations thanks to MedShare and Possible, a nonprofit healthcare community in rural Nepal. Treating more than 500,000 patients, Possible has a 12% observed reduction in under two mortality in the areas they serve!

Maternal & Child Health

2 Million Mothers

Each year 2 million mothers watch their babies die within 24 hours of birth, according to the World Health Organization (WHO). But these deaths are preventable. In fact, according to the UN, 98% of maternal deaths are preventable. And the WHO agrees that if low-cost, low-tech medical care is provided to infants and new mothers at birth, 3 million babies can be saved each year.

That's why MedShare is delivering 100,000 Clean Birthing Kits to communities in need around the world. Each kit contains the medical supplies necessary for women to give birth safely in areas without healthcare resources. In 2017, we launched 2 Million Mothers, an initiative of our Maternal & Child Health Program. 2 Million Mothers aims to

Primary Care

Strengthening Health Systems in Ethiopia

In 2014, MedShare began an ambitious project with the Ethiopian Ministry of Health. They asked us to help strengthen their struggling health system in the wake of a devastating drought and economic difficulties. Hospitals couldn't afford basic medical supplies and doctors like Ibrahim Kassim (seen above) helplessly watched their patients die -- all because they didn't have the tools they needed to save the lives of their patients.

60 shipment donations, over 1 million pounds of supplies, and 3 years later, MedShare completed our final delivery in 2017.

“I will never forget the one particular child I was unable to treat due to a lack of medical equipment and supplies.”

Dr. Ibrahim Kassim, Aysaita Hospital, Ethiopia

We donated $9.2 million worth of lifesaving medical supplies and equipment to support Ethiopia's healthcare. In addition to strengthening their health system in the long-term, these donations enabled healthcare professionals like Dr. Kassim to save countless lives and let patients like Hannan, the little girl you see above, go on to live happy and healthy lives.

Disaster Relief

Responding to Hurricane Matthew

After watching her country being devastated by Hurricane Matthew, Gaelle Castor organized several Medical Mission Teams to go to Haiti. She collected supplies at MedShare and made her way to the Tiburon Peninsula, the area severely damaged by the storm.

Many of the towns that she and her team trekked to were completely cut off from the rest of the island, meaning that they had been waiting for medical assistance for over a week.

But despite the devastation they'd experienced and the injuries they'd sustained, members of each community greeted Gaelle and her team with smiles.

“I have seen my people deprived of everything they need, yet smiling for so little that we gave them.”

Gaelle Castor, Medical Mission Team Leader in Haiti

As she distributed first aid and hygiene supplies, Gaelle remarked that, though Haiti has faced natural disasters time and time again, Haitians never give up hope. And as Haiti continues to heal, MedShare continues to care.

Infectious Disease Control & Prevention

Something as simple as gloves...

Our CEO and President, Charles Redding, saw the long-term effects of our Infectious Disease Control & Prevention Program when he traveled to Liberia this year.

Just a short time ago, the threat of Ebola endangered all of West Africa. But, thanks to the cooperation of the international community and the work of brave healthcare professionals on the ground, Liberia is officially Ebola-free. The crisis taught us an important lesson: something as simple as a pair of gloves or a mask can make the difference between life and death for patients and healthcare professionals alike.

That's why MedShare sends Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) to communities vulnerable to infectious disease epidemics. We're preparing communities for possible outbreaks and making sure that no healthcare professional has to risk their own life to save a patient's.

“When an institution approached us to collect the aid, they stated that they had run out of gloves for medical examinations the day before!”

Training Engineers for Stronger Health Systems

Less than 30% of donated biomedical equipment in Sub-Saharan Africa is usable, according to the WHO. Often times the equipment is donated broken, missing essential parts, or sent without the proper tools and manuals needed for repairs. Because of this, 70% of biomedical equipment sits idle in hospitals where functioning equipment could save lives. This was the case in many military hospitals in Nigeria.

If you need surgery in Nigeria, chances are, you'll go to a military hospital to get the most comprehensive care. These hospitals have the best-equipped facilities, they host visiting specialists from around the world, and, most importantly, they won't turn patients away who can't afford treatment. But because of the huge number of patients visiting these facilities each year, the hospital system desperately needed biomedical equipment upgrades. That's where MedShare stepped in.

MedShare's Director of Biomedical Equipment Training & Repair, Eben Armstrong, traveled to Nigeria to train engineers and revitalize the Navy hospitals' biomedical engineering and diagnostic programs. In just six days, 21 engineers from the Navy, Army, and Air Force received hands-on training on 107 different pieces of equipment. From huge diagnostic pieces like MRI machines, to more basic emergency care instruments like defibrillators, trainees were given the tools and expertise to save lives. In addition to learning how to use new pieces, the engineers received essential repair training. With the tools, parts, and knowledge to fix their own equipment, hospital staff will no longer have to watch patients suffer, all for want of a simple part or a specific tool. Trainees emerged from the program well-prepared to fix problems that would have rendered their equipment unusable before.

“These trainees are very happy to be touched by the wonderful work done by MedShare. They have gained knowledge and developed confidence and pride in what they do.”

This year, members of the Nigerian military's medical corps benefited from MedShare's Biomedical Equipment Training & Repair Service, studying over 100 different pieces of equipment.

Medical Mission Teams

Worldwide Healing Hands

MedShare has equipped California-based Worldwide Healing Hands since 2012. Carrying MedShare supplies, Dr. Paula Dhanda and her team have traveled to Nepal, Haiti, Chad, and Uganda treating women and families in communities without access to traditional medical care.

Dr. Dhanda illustrated the lifesaving consequences of having MedShare supplies when she was honored at Talk & Taste this year:

“One of the most valuable things that you donate to us are Ambu Bags -- neonatal resuscitation bags. Whenever we train our midwives and surgeons in a program called Helping Babies Breathe, we like to equip them with Ambu bags.

“That donation was huge in saving this little boy’s life.”

Dr. Paula Dhanda, Founder, CEO, & Medical Director of Worldwide Healing Hands

We were in Nepal one time and this infant came in, only a few months old, and he was in respiratory distress. Nobody who was there knew how to resuscitate the baby. But we had an Ambu bag and one of our anesthesiologists was able to successfully resuscitate the baby and give the baby care. That donation was huge in saving this little boy’s life.”

RotaCare Free Clinic at Davis Street Family Resource Center serves 400 uninsured and under-insured patients in the San Francisco Bay Area each year.

RotaCare Free Clinic at Davis Street

Serving under-insured patients, immigrants, and refugees in the San Francisco Bay area, RotaCare provides care for the most vulnerable people in their community. MedShare has donated thousands of dollars worth of supplies to the clinic, including all of their syringes and needles. Simple items with an enormous impact.

This year RotaCare treated two young refugee children. Just a week before walking through the clinic's doors, the children and their father had escaped the civil war in Syria. This dad sought care and compassion for his kids as their family started over with nothing, and they found it here. The vaccinations they received allowed his children to be enrolled in school. It was a routine procedure, but for this family, it opened the door to their new life in the US.

Stories like this remind us why our mission is so important. Because, in the hands of caring and compassionate medical professionals like those at RotaCare Free Clinic at Davis Street Family Resource Center, the supplies we donate truly change lives.

“The father expressed much relief in being able to bring his children over to start a new life in America.”

Volunteers Make Clean Birthing Kits

As a part of our 2 Million Mothers initiative, MedShare has committed to delivering 100,000 Clean Birthing Kits to communities where women do not have access to traditional maternal and neonatal care. With the help of our volunteers, more than 2,200 kits were made in 2017!

Starting with a special sort session coordinated by our partners at Sutter Health in San Francisco, our local communities came together to support moms in medically underserved countries. Following Sutter Health's example, Chick-fil-A Headquarters and Robert Half, in partnership with Hands On Bay Area, each hosted their own Clean Birthing Kit sort sessions and made over 2,000 kits to protect the lives of more than 4,000 mothers and infants!

Volunteers from Shree Swaminarayan Temple, the largest group to volunteer in our Northeast Region this year, contributed to three key projects supporting medically underserved communities.

Medtronic and MedShare

Medtronic is one of MedShare's longest standing, most generous partners. Having donated more than $37.5 million worth of medical supplies and equipment, the communities we serve have benefited from products provided by Medtronic for nearly two decades. The lifesaving supplies they donate are in extremely high demand in the areas we serve, and many of the facilities we equip would otherwise suffer without these essential items. Medtronic's generosity has allowed us to provide quality healthcare to 2.1 million patients.

Medtronic has contributed to all of our programs, but most significantly to our Primary Care and Disaster Relief Programs. Medtronic donations have supported relief efforts following seven natural disasters. From sutures to feeding pumps, the wide variety of critical supplies that Medtronic has donated has strengthened healthcare in 92 countries. Together, Medtronic and MedShare are improving the quality of life of people and our planet.

Visiting Liberia

Just two years ago, Liberia was at the epicenter of the Ebola epidemic. Healthcare professionals and patients alike were dying all because they lacked the supplies and equipment necessary to stop the spread of the disease.

This year, MedShare's CEO and President, Charles Redding, traveled to Liberia and found a country still in crisis. Communities were struggling and healthcare facilities were still in great need. But a lack of resources didn't stop many facilities from finding a way to provide care. While traveling, Charles met Dr. Martha Zarway, who got her start by treating patients in rural areas out of the back of her van. She now runs Kingdom Care Medical Center, providing critical care for less than 25 cents per patient. He witnessed the courage exhibited by the dedicated healthcare professionals who risk their lives and reputations to treat patients of leprosy, buruli ulcers and tuberculosis – all highly infectious diseases that still carry a life-altering stigma in Liberian culture.

Charles had the opportunity to observe the wide spectrum of Liberia's healthcare needs first-hand. He gained a better understanding of how international aid can be most effective in communities where resources are scarce, but compassion is not. Seeing the dedication and perseverance of Liberian healthcare professionals served as an important reminder that cooperative collaboration is the only way to sustainably strengthen healthcare in medically underserved communities. When we support talented medical professionals working for better health in their communities, we support improved healthcare for all.

“It is because of dedicated and caring individuals within the Liberian healthcare system that I believe there is hope for Liberia.”

Charles Redding, CEO & President of MedShare

Former Leper Colony, Liberia -- Generations of children have been born and raised in Ganta Rehabilitation Center because their parents and grandparents were shunned for their illness. Even after being cured of the disease, former patients and their families are ostracized from society.
